How to use: Name one skill you are paid for, or one your child is planning to build. Answer each question yes or no (Chapter 7). More yeses suggest a more defensible skill; this is a reflection exercise, not a career assessment.

The skill:

| # | Question | Yes / No | Why |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | Does it resist full specification in advance? | | |
| 2 | Is the provider's identity part of the value? | | |
| 3 | Must a person be answerable for failure? | | |
| 4 | Does it happen in an unstructured physical or social environment? | | |
| 5 | Does the buyer want the process itself to be human? | | |

Total yeses: In the book's view, a skill with five noes is under real pressure, whatever it pays today, and three or more yeses usually signals a more defensible position. Your situation may differ.
